

When you know you're included, you feel that you belong.

Everyone learns better when you support every one.

A learning environment that welcomes and supports all students is not only a moral essential, but an educational one. When students of every background and ability are included and embraced, you give them a sense of belonging — and create a stimulating, diverse atmosphere that can benefit all your learners.<sup>1</sup>

Early Childhood

Belonging starts at the beginning.

INCLUSION STRATEGY

Gross motor skills and adequate core support are essential for optimal learning and task focus. This boat and its steps allow teachers and therapists to incorporate movement activities in a classroom, gross motor lab, indoor play area, gymnasium, or therapy space. Students practice motor planning by rocking the boat on one side while crawling or climbing the steps on the other. While working in tandem to rock the boat, they exercise their minds as well as their bodies, building relationships and practicing cooperation.
